Empowering Mobilizers: The Community Mobilization in Crisis Project

Emily Regan Wills, Nadia Abu Zahra, Diana El Richani

What is the Community Mobilization in Crisis Project

- CMIC's framework is designed to provide refugees and host community members access to higher education through in-class, online, and experiential learning tools.
- The program aims to connect refugees and host community members while enhancing their community mobilization skills needed to develop interventions and initiatives in their respective communities.
- Partnerships with institutions and grassroots in Lebanon, Palestine, Iraq, and Brazil: Faculty of Health Sciences at the American University of Beirut, Chams Network, Youth Speak, University of Brasilia

Why Community Mobilization?

- A tactic and a strategy to empower local communities
- Can be used to address immediate issues and structural issues
- Particularly useful for helping communities become more self-reliant, less dependent on aid, and more likely to make decisions through inclusive and democratic processes.
